"We are delighted to have Brendan and Eric become directors of Neoprobe," said David Bupp, Neoprobe's President and CEO. "Both provide Neoprobe with outstanding development, commercial and strategic business experience regarding the development and commercialization of pharmaceutical and medical products that will be invaluable to the Neoprobe management team as we commercialize Lymphoseek[®] and as we continue to pursue our development and commercialization strategy for the RIGS[®] technology. We believe that adding Brendan and Eric to the Board is very positive for Neoprobe and its stockholders and we look forward to working with them."

In connection with the nomination of the new directors, Neoprobe also announced that Reuven Avital and J. Frank Whitley, Jr., both longtime Neoprobe directors, will retire from the Board following the 2010 Annual Meeting of Stockholders.

"Reuven and Frank will be greatly missed on our Board," stated Carl J. Aschinger, Jr., Neoprobe's Chairman. "Their years of wisdom, insight and guidance have been of enormous value to Neoprobe, and our work has been enriched as a result. During their tenure on the Board, Neoprobe reinvented itself into a biomedical company with tremendous commercial and development potential in the field of radiopharmaceuticals. That success is in no small part due to the perspectives and engagement that Reuven and Frank brought to the Board. We are all grateful for their service to the organization and we wish them well."
